Dear recruiter,

Since at the moment I am enrolled in the last year of my studies at Faculty of Electrical Engineering in Sarajevo, department for Computer Science and Informatics, I would like to apply for this amazing opportunity.

I would like to gain as much practical experience as I can and applying for this internship program for me seems like an opportunity to help me develop myself in many ways. First of all, I think that it would give me really good insight of how actually the work is done in big companies and most important help me decide what exactly I would like to do in my future. This would be a real boost to my future career, especially because Germany is such a great country, which gives remarkable education and has a famous work reputation, which I would like to experience myself. My German language skills are on A2/B1 level, so this is also a perfect chance to improve it.

My dream job would definitely be in research and development department of the automotive sector. This industry is very exciting for me and I would really give my best to make some progress for the industry. As a young and educated person with a passion for this industry, I believe I could be helpful and innovative. Fields that I would absolutely enjoy learning about and that would be the most appealing for me are artificial intelligence, data science and robotics.

The working field that would also be really nice for my future career and in which I have experience through the university projects is software development, so any IT sector. Doing an internship in departments like these, would give me an opportunity to firstly apply all of the knowledge and experience I gained during my study period as a base and then upgrade it with solving real problems and making actual progress and improvements. The most important part for me is to learn about the technical things, technologies used and their applications, possible new technologies, which would all be a boost to my creativity and critical thinking. By learning and working on these things, I would learn also about the project managing, the whole concept of the company and the business processes, which is also very positive.

I think I can say for myself that I am organized, diligent and persistent in what I am doing. I am a successful student, who completes all of the tasks in time. These skills are beneficial for me as a future adaptable worker with good communication skills. I believe I can make positive contributions to the company as an open-minded fresh brain with a lot of ideas and a huge will to learn.

I am also highly motivated to make any development in Bosnia and Herzegovina. This is an incredible country with a wonderful energy and I see a lot of potential in it to grow, mostly because of the loads of very smart young people who maybe don't get a chance to glow. At the moment I am seeking for opportunities to firstly develop myself, so one day I have a good background and would be able to help others and make a big change to my country. I am extremely optimistic person and in my private life I always try to motivate people around me, usually my university colleagues. My goal in life is actually to become strong and successful, so I can show people on my own example that they can do it!

Thank you for considering my application!

Sincerely,
Hana Mekic
